

Third Sunday of Lent

Today's Readings: Missal Page 74

Time is not our own, and we must give a strict account of it.

- Saint Turibius of Mongrovejo (1538-1606),
Patron of native rights, Feast Day March 23

Special Note: As widespread vaccinations for COVID-19 take place and infection rates continue to decline, we encourage parishes to maintain in-person activities.

Please note:

- masks are optional, but recommended for safety;
- all churches may seat at full capacity, subject to local outbreaks where social distance should be observed as needed;
- vaccinations are encouraged, while respecting individual conscience rights

Christ Calls Us to the Here and Now

Following Christ does not mean that we have to give up our jobs, schools, love of sports and entertainment, playing video games, or our social media handles. At least, not necessarily. What it means is that we need to let go of everything that produces anxiety in us and takes up our time without any benefit to ourselves or the world; it means giving up the trivial worries that merely keep us busy, give us something to think about, offer an escape, or hide us from what really matters. Christ calls us to the here and now. He wants us to be present to people and things that actually make a difference. If we want to be his disciples, there is no time to waste living in a world that doesn't exist. The kingdom is at hand, and it's the only world we need.
